SUNDAY LITURGY

1st Reading: Isaiah 45:1-4-6 2nd Reading: 1 Thessalonians 1:1-5b; Gospel: Matthew 22:15-21

Theme: The Christian and the State.

A Christian has the same rights as anybody else and does not claim exemption or privilege. We must also pay taxes. The first reading throws light on the relationship between faith and politics. God guides history so that everything may lead to the happiness of his people. The second reading is connected to this theme: it shows how in a concrete way Christians of Thessalonica lived out their religion.

Response to the Psalm: Ascribe to the Lord glory and Power.

Gospel Acclamation:

Alleluia, alleluia!

Shine as lights in the world, holding fast to the word of life.

Alleluia.

Building News. Our latest meeting with our lead from the diocese was on Wed this week. Our main discussion was about the removal of items from the church. We were discussing where the valuables and historic items that need special care will be held until the major works are completed. We have a small group of parishioners who are going to list all items (fixed and movable) within the church and meet with a representative from a storage company in Peterborough. The Historic Churches Committee in the Diocese this week agreed to the details of all the necessary works to be done to make the church safe, so we have permission to move forward.
